First Boeing 737-800 for KLM Rolls Toward Delivery

The first of eight Next-Generation 737-800s ordered by KLM-Royal Dutch Airlines rolls out of the Boeing paint hangar in Renton, Wash. KLM will take delivery of this airplane later this month and will expand its services among several European destinations. KLM is a major international carrier that operates an all-Boeing fleet. The Next-Generation 737 is the fastest-selling new jetliner in history, with more than 1,100 ordered by customers worldwide.
