Seventh Condor Boeing 757-300 Flies Home

The last Boeing 757-300 to be delivered to German holiday airline Condor Flugdienst in 1999 takes off from Boeing Field in Seattle, Wash., for Frankfurt. The airline, which put the first 757-300 into revenue service in March, now has seven of the airplanes. To date -- in service with Condor -- the 757-300 has 99.5 percent schedule reliability and can be turned around at airports in less than an hour. Boeing is scheduled to deliver six more 757-300s to Condor in 2000.
