Continental Airlines Takes Delivery Of First Boeing 767-400ER

Boeing today delivered the first of 26 767-400ER (extended range) airplanes on order with Continental Airlines. The newest member of the 767 family, the 767-400ER has increased passenger capacity, enabling airlines to transport more customers within existing routes and thereby ease air traffic congestion. It also features aerodynamic improvements, including innovative new raked wing tips, increased takeoff-weight capability, improved electrical and air-conditioning systems and an all-new main landing gear.
