Boeing Selects Foote, Cone & Belding as Global Advertising Agency of Record

The Boeing Company [NYSE: BA] today announced the selection of Foote, Cone & Belding's Chicago office as its global advertising agency of record.

The decision follows a four-month, competitive review process in which Boeing identified FCB, BBDO and J. Walter Thompson, all of Chicago, to participate in the final review stage.

"In the end, we selected the FCB team as the best positioned to take us to the next level -- strengthening and leveraging our brand worldwide," said Judith Muhlberg, vice president of communications for Boeing. "Our expectations are huge as we seek stronger communications strategies to tell the Boeing story. FCB presented a campaign with a powerful, simple message that captured the spirit of Boeing."

Boeing announced its intention to put the advertising account up for review in July 2001, where upon it invited advertising agencies within the Chicago area that met specific criteria to participate in the process. FCB's Seattle office most recently served the account.

"The move of our headquarters to Chicago in September provided us with an opportunity to reassess our advertising needs," said Anne Toulouse, vice president of brand management and advertising for Boeing. "FCB Chicago, led by Dana Anderson and Jonathon Harries, delivered a strong response and demonstrated the qualities we sought in a strategic partner."

Commenting on the competitive nature of the review, Anne Toulouse stated that, "The talent of Chicago's advertising industry is impressive, and lived up to its reputation of being a world-class center."

Members of the review team included advertising directors from Boeing's various business units. Bob Wolf Partners/TPG assisted with the agency review. The value of the advertising account, which includes campaigns for Boeing at the corporate level and several business units, was not disclosed.
