Carnegie Mellon and Boeing Win Unmanned Ground Combat Vehicle Award

Carnegie Mellon and Boeing have been awarded $5.5 million to build and test a prototype robotic unmanned ground combat vehicle, or UGCV . The hybrid-powered vehicle, pictured in this artist's conception, will combine fuel efficiency, survivability and payload flexibility to deliver the long-range capability required for UGCV missions.