Eye-Catching Winglets, New Colors Distinguish Luxair's First Boeing 737-700

Luxair's first Boeing Next-Generation 737-700, sporting the airline's new livery and a pair of elegant blended winglets on its wingtips, began operations this month. Luxair, the national airline of the Grand Dutchy of Luxembourg, is using the new airplane on scheduled flights within Europe and on chartered holiday flights to sunshine destinations. The blended winglets reduce takeoff noise at airports, reduce fuel costs and increase the distance the 737-700 can fly. This is the first of three 737-700s the airline has ordered to replace its Boeing 737 Classic airplanes. (Photo provided by Luxair)

###

For further information:
Cheryl Addams
206-766-2919
Sandy Angers
425-237-3657
Mike Tull
Brussels
32 2 777 0710
Ken DeJarlais
kenneth.r.dejarlais@boeing.com