EVA Air Takes Delivery of its Third Boeing 777-300ER

Plane scheduled for static display at the Farnborough International Air Show 2006

Boeing delivered a new 777-300ER (Extended Range) to Taiwan's EVA Air on Thursday. It is the third Boeing 777-300ER received by the airline which is one of the launch customers for the 777.

The twin-engine EVA Air 777-300ER carries 316 passengers in a three-class configuration and flies up to 7,880 nautical miles (14,594 kilometers). The airplane is capable of serving such routes as Los Angeles - Taipei and Taipei - London.

The Boeing 777-300ER delivered yesterday to EVA Air features a special livery and will be on static display from July 17 - 23 at the Farnborough International Air Show (FIA) 2006 in the U.K.
