EVA Air's Boeing 777-300ER Arrives at Farnborough International Air Show 2006

Look! Up in the sky! It's green, it's orange, it's Taiwan's EVA Air's Boeing 777-300ER (Extended Range) arriving at the Farnborough International Air Show airfield. The new jetliner Boeing delivered to EVA Air last month features a special livery and will be on static display during the air show from July 17 - 23.

It is the third Boeing 777-300ER EVA Air operates, EVA Air is one of the launch customers for the 777.

The twin-engine EVA Air 777-300ER carries 316 passengers in a three-class configuration and flies up to 7,880 nautical miles (14,594 kilometers). The airplane is capable of serving such routes as Los Angeles - Taipei and Taipei - London.
