Boeing Discusses Continued 787 Progress

Mike Bair, vice president and general manager of the 787 program, today told reporters at the Farnborough Air Show that progress continues on the development of the 747-400 Large Cargo Freighter (LCF) that will be used to transport large structural elements from Italy and Japan to the United States. The airplanes are being modified by Evergreen Aviation Technologies Corporation at their facility in Taipei, Taiwan. The first airplane is nearly complete.
