Boeing India Appoints Gillian Sourcing Director

The Boeing Company [NYSE:BA] announced today that Daniel Gillian has been named director of enterprise sourcing for India. He will be based out of Boeing's India headquarters in New Delhi.

"We are strengthening our enterprise presence in India and Dan will play a central role in establishing strategic business relationships with Indian industry." said Ian Thomas, president of Boeing India. "Dan will help develop our network of Indian partners and will pursue mutually beneficial growth and productivity opportunities."

Gillian has held several positions during a seven-year Boeing career including assignments in program management and engineering functions. He most recently served as program manager for avionics on critical platforms for Boeing Integrated Defense Systems.

Gillian holds a master's in business administration from Washington University in St. Louis, Mo.

Boeing is the world's leading aerospace company and the largest manufacturer of commercial jetliners and military aircraft combined. Additionally, Boeing designs and manufactures rotorcraft, electronic and defense systems, missiles, satellites, launch vehicles and advanced information and communication systems. As a major service provider to NASA, Boeing operates the Space Shuttle and International Space Station. The company also provides numerous military and commercial airline support services. Boeing has customers in more than 90 countries around the world and is one of the largest U.S. exporters in terms of sales. Headquartered in Chicago, Boeing employs more than 150,000 people across the United States and in 70 countries. Total company revenues for 2006 were $61.5 billion.

###

For further information:
Lizum Mishra
+91-114656-6099 (direct)