Updated: Boeing Statement on Malaysia Airlines Flight 370

Since day one, the families and loved ones of those aboard Malaysia Airlines Flight 370 have been in our thoughts and prayers. Our goal, along with the entire global aviation community, is to find out what happened to the airplane—and why.

Boeing is actively engaged as technical advisor to the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board, sharing our technical expertise and analysis with the Malaysian investigation team and supporting the ongoing search. While all updates and information must come from Malaysian authorities, we are working with all parties in hopes of bringing this to a resolution as soon as possible.

Boeing will participate in and support the effort to find effective and efficient ways to enhance global tracking of airplanes.